Over 500 participants, operators and professionals of the wood-energy supply chain, attended the digital meeting organized by AIEL, the Italian Association of Agroforestry Energy (video event below) thanks to the collaboration with ENEA and Uncem to clarify the main technical questions relating to Superbonus 110% applied to wood biomass heating.

During the meeting some of the main ones were resolved doubts of operators, including the definition of "5-star boiler" and "hybrid systems", the certification of biofuels according to the technical standard ISO 17225, the price lists in use, as well as some operating anomalies that have been reported on the ENEA Ecobonus Portal.

The use of biomass technologies in driving interventions remains the main of the still open fronts. AIEL is committed to soliciting the MiSE for untie the unresolved knots and allow the biomass heating sector to really consider the Superbonus as a solid and concrete opportunity.

The sub-fund represents the first national renewable source with a production of 7.7 Mtoe of energy out of a national total of 21.6 Mtoe, and that counts 14,000 companies, with a total turnover of 4 billion euros, e 72,000 jobs.

"The sector is confident that this incentive will achieve the two objectives of the legislator: to contribute to the economic recovery of the country and to increase the energy efficiency of private buildings ", he said. Domenico Brugnoni, president of AIEL

"The complexity of this incentive tool inevitably involves a large number of questions, particular cases, situations to be interpreted in the light of current legislation. But it is equally clear that, if we want the objectives of the provision to be transformed into concrete facts, it is necessary to give all the answers, to clarify the doubts, to clear the interpretative uncertainties that are still partly present, despite the significant commitment on several fronts by the of the relevant institutions ", concludes Brugnoni.
